“ One of the earliest memories I have of Aunt Stevie was when she and Uncle Henry took my cousin Lorraine & I to the circus. What a treat! Such a kind thing to do. Aunt Stevie used her time, energy, and resources to be involved in the lives of all us cousins. She shared in our achievements and sorrows.

In 1982, I moved to Texas so my relationship with Aunt Stevie became mostly telephonic, except for a few visits to Michigan. And Aunt Stevie loved to talk on the phone! Even after two hours, we still had more to talk about but our voices gave out. Clearly, Aunt Stevie's and Uncle Henry's family were the most important things in her life. She joyfully related all the wonderful events concerning our large extended family and sadly shared the bad news. She was so supportive of all of us.

One year I mixed up the month of Aunt Stevie's birthday. My sister Dolly's birthday is May 15 and for some reason I got confused and believed it to be Aunt Stevie's instead. I always sent Aunt Stevie a birthday card but I didn't that March, thinking her birthday was in May. When I called Aunt Stevie in April, I couldn't understand why she was so cool to me. Finally she mentioned how she celebrated the "birthdays" with Ricky and Sarah. "Oh no," I exclaimed, and realized what was wrong. I explained how I got mixed-up. I was so touched that a birthday card from me meant so much to her. As a joke, I sent her a birthday card in May and we laughed like crazy over it. She had a better memory than me!

Losing Aunt Stevie is such a great personal loss. I've been without a mother for almost 50 years and she stepped up to help fill that void. How valuable to have the wisdom and experience of an older woman to offer support and guidance.

Rest in peace, dear Aunt Stevie.
