“ The death of your loved one Caroline is sad. You may find yourself worrying, ‘What will become of me now?’ The Bible counsels to take one day at a time. “Living more on a day-to-day basis really helps me,” explains one widow. Jesus said to his disciples: “Never be anxious about the next day, for the next day will have its own anxieties.”—Matthew 6:25-34. www.jw.org

“ So sorry for the loss of your Mom. Aunt Carol was a delightful person. Barry and I are so glad we were able to know her. We will miss her at the birthday celebrations. Sorry we could not make it to the funeral. We are out of town. Our thoughts and prayers are with you. closeRuth and Barty Oleksyk.

“ Hard to remember a time she wasn't at one of our sporting events growing up. Also always remember the times playing over at her house. She will be missed. Michael Peragine

“ Dear Sharon and Marie,
Wow it is hard to believe that Aunty Car finally has decided to end her earthly pastimes and join her loving husband, sisters, brother, dad, mom and so many others in heaven. I can imagine that her and my mom are already sitting together on a glider in a beautiful backyard, maybe with Tiger at their feet, chatting it up catching up on whats been going on for the past two years since they last spoke in person -- Kevin got a job! My mom is going in India on September 22! You never get over the loss of a mom, ours were two of the best, thats for sure. The trips to the Belle Isle zoo, the Detroit zoo, Michigan state fair, Irish Hills, Lexington, the list goes on and on. I can totally relate to what you are going through and I know the pain you are feeling. You get used to the emptiness but it never goes away. I am just feeling for you both and wishing you some solace in knowing that she lives on, and as she left this place, her family and friends were someplace else welcoming her to a place of no suffering or pain, old age or sadness where she and your dad are eternally dancing those embarassing swing dances that sent you running to hide in the restroom at countless weddings when we were kids. LOVE YOU BOTH AND YOUR FAMILIES MORE THAN YOU KNOW. When this is calmed down a bit, lets have a meal together. much love, Kathy and family
