“ One of my favorite Maya Angelou quotes is:
“I've learned that people will forget what you said, people will forget what you did, but people will never forget how you made them feel.”

George was a childhood friend and our mother's Godson. She loved him and would have been heartbroken at his early passing. I hope they are together now. I know they are with God.

We lost touch with George over the years and it's a regret of mine. George was fun and funny and had a really sharp wit. Whenever our paths would cross I was delighted to see him and listen to his clever observations about whatever topic we were discussing. He always left me feeling happy to have seen him and wishing we spent more time together.

I am foremost saddened for his family and secondly for myself that I won't have the pleasure of his company in this lifetime. George was loved by our entire family.

Rest In Peace! Vichnaya Pamyat

“ George is a long time friend of mine. 50 years.
We worked at different companies together. I can recall 3 different moves to a new company (always in the packaging industry).
When one of us moved, either I would get George to move or he would get me to move & it was always a step up & we would continue to work together.
We worked hard & we could always make each other laugh.
Sometimes it took me a minute to understand his humor, because it was often dry, intellectual humor.
The last time I tried to get George to come & work with me, he told me he was going to retire & then he sent me a picture of his Grandson Vincent & said: here is a picture of my new Boss.
I told him his Boss was adoreable & to enjoy his new employment.
George was a great guy, a hard worker, smart as a whip & had a photographic memory.
He will be missed.
God rest his soul.

“ George was the smartest person in our high school class. He had a great sense of humor. I owe him a debt of gratitude. Goodbye, old friend.
