“ Jordan, I don't even know what to say. My heart feels like it's in a million pieces. I've struggled everyday since you left. You were such a smart, funny, beautiful person. You truly meant so much to me. I'll never forget the times we had or the love we shared for each other. You inspired me to be the best person I could be, you thought me what true love really is and I'll keep that with me forever. I love you so incredibly much. Rest easy angel.

“ My brother, my very first friend. What I wouldn't give to see that "I'm not trying to smile" smirk, or that pick me up off the ground hug. Apart of me has been taken with you when you went and I know I will never feel full again. You were part of me. I never wanted this day to come because I knew that meant mom and I have to live without you. The hardest thing I have ever had to go through, and watch mom go through. i love you with every inch of my heart. I am because you were.

“ On February 14, 1993, God blessed me with a gift so great that I will remember it always. The moment the nurse handed you to me I was filled with a love I had never known and a love I will never know again. You, like me, gravitated and loved only certain people with your whole heart. You were smart, funny, quick and so handsome - but suffered with anxiety all the time. You didn't see what everyone else saw in you, and you felt like you didn't measure up. As a Mother, hearing you say that crushed my heart because I saw you. I knew your heart. I want you to know that I wouldn't change one thing I have done for or with you these six years. I am forever grateful that I followed my heart and did what I believed was the right thing. If I had walked away from you, I know I wouldn't be able to be here today. Was it the most challenging, chaotic, heart-wrenching six years I have ever known - oh God yes. But you are my son. Nothing and no one - no words, no opinions - nothing - would have stopped me from loving you and standing by your side no matter what. Jordan, my sweet son - I will never be the same without you. I sit and think of life without you in it and the thought literally brings me to my knees. Who am I without you Jordan? What do I do now without you? I know you fought so hard, I know you wanted to be someone different, I know you were crushed by what people thought of you but I also know that you knew that mattered nothing to me. Your sister and I loved you as you will never know. We are mutually devastated and the people who stood by your side through the good, bad and the painful. Your leaving has left a hole so deep inside me that I don't know what could possibly fill it up. I hope you left this earth knowing how much I loved and adored you, how I longed for you to be happy and free from this addiction - how I would have done literally anything, ANYTHING to make that happen. Like Patrick, it was just too much for you to bear, and I know that now you are free without addiction, heartache and pain. I love you as I always have - big as the world, deep as the ocean and will never be the same without you. Love, Mom
