“When you find “joy” in the dictionary, it says “a feeling of great pleasure and happiness”

When my oldest sister came into this world, she was given the name “Joy”. How could mom and dad been so prophetic?

I arrived just in time for her 9th birthday, a fact that she repeated often, “Jimmy was my 9th birthday present”. All my life, I had a big sister Joy. Until now. Joy always just took care of things. As a little boy, she watched over me as we walked the mile and quarter to the bus stop every school day, snow, rain, or sunny. She watched over me as I learned to milk the cows every morning and evening. Starting out, she did it, but after she married and left, I did.

She married Irwin when I was a lad of 9, and every year when they went on vacation, they took me. She and Irwin taught me to hunt, and to fish, and to enjoy camping in a tent.

During my long military career she kept me up on what was going on in the family, and the health or maladies of mom and dad.

When they left us, she was the executrix of their will, seeing to every detail, every need.

The last thing she did was to pack that truck with everything the rest of us would need to enjoy our reunion, food, drinks, coolers, bedding, towels, everything.

And when the reunion was ready to get underway, she left us to enjoy one another’s company.

I’m gonna miss my big sister more than I can say. Trouble is, I never adequately said thank you.

“ This is a recent memory, among many over the years. In March when I had heart surgery , Aunt Joy told me that she was coming to the hospital to sit with Victor so that he wouldn't be alone. She did just that, at 6:30am at St. Mary's in Saginaw. She kept Victor's mind off of the surgery by telling him family stories. This is the kind of compassion she had for family and friends. I'm going to miss her greatly.....gone to soon !! Love You Aunt Joy. R.I.P.

I remember when Aunt Joy came to our house in NC on fathers day 2009, what a great treat it was to see her. I will miss everything about her, she was an amazing lady and someone I looked up to. She is already missed. I love you Aunt Joy.
