“ Shari was my student in third grade many years ago. She was always one I could depend on when we had a non-English speaking student to mentor. She loved to help. Never, ever a grumble. Our relationship continued through the years as I raised my son, Joel. She and her parents and extended family shared many wonderful, crazy fun times together. She was truly one of a kind. Her compassion for others and love of God stands out in my mind. When she faced her daunting trials with her illness’ she never wavered in her faith. She truly wanted to be a loving mom to her precious Emma and Michael and have them share her faith in God. Her death is so hard to accept, but Shari is now free from her awful pain and in the presence of God. Her last words to me were, “I love you.” I will always love you, my Precious Shari. 💕🥹🙏

“ I have so many memories with Shari that I'll cherish forever. I'll share a couple. Shari and I moved to EMU together as roomies. She went home to be with her family but I was so grateful she was there while she was to help me adjust. My second favorite memory is her holding my hand when I gave birth to my firstborn. She was just as excited as I was. She never left my side. I wouldn't have wanted it any other way. I love you Shari and I always will. I will miss you until my last breath when I will see you again.
